Study Days Policy

A Study Day is a day when 16-week semester courses are suspended for traditional undergraduate students, immediately prior to finals’ week. Instructors may hold clinicals, lab practicals and study sessions to review previous course work as long as no new material is introduced during the sessions. A Study Day is also often used to study for exams, and to complete papers, presentations and projects.

The last Thursday and Friday of each term are designated as Study Days. Finals will be held from Tuesday to Friday of finals’ week, i.e., there will be a 5-day space between the last day of instruction and the first day of finals. This policy will go into full effect Fall 2019.
