Opportunity Task #2:
Academic Lesson Design, Implementation and Reflection

This task provides you with preparation and feedback for the following TPEs:

- Apply knowledge of students, including their prior experiences, interests, and social-emotional learning needs, as well as their funds of knowledge and cultural, language, and socioeconomic backgrounds, to engage them in learning. (TPE 1.1)
- Connect subject matter to real-life contexts and provide active learning experiences (TPE 1.3)
- Use a variety of developmentally and ability-appropriate instructional strategies for a wide range of learners (TPE 1.4)
- Provide a supportive learning environment for English and Standard English learners (TPE 1.6)
- Use knowledge about students and learning goals to organize curriculum (TPE 3.2)
- Adapt subject matter curriculum, organization and planning to support the acquisition and use of academic language (TPE 3.5)
- Applying information about students for short-term and long-term planning(TPE 4.1)
- Understand and apply knowledge of the range of learners (TPE 4.2)
- Plan, design, implement, and monitor instruction making effective use of developmentally, linguistically, and culturally appropriate learning activities for the full range of English learners (TPE 4.4 c)
- Reflecting on your own pedagogy and practice (TPE 6.1)

Preparation: This will be your initial plan.

(Involve your cooperating teacher in helping you with these steps as needed.)

1. Knowing your students is the first important step in teaching them. Gather important basic information about your class. Don't assume anything-- be sure to sit with your cooperating teacher, or use other resources to find out.
 - Grade level?
 - Program model? (Is it a general education or special education class? Structured English Immersion class? a Bilingual class? What are the specific characteristics of the program model of this class?)
 - Number of students? Number of boys, number of girls
 - Percentage of students receiving free or reduced price lunch?
 - Cultural Background/Ethnicity of students? How many African American, Asian, American Indian, Latinx, White, Other?
 - Language Proficiency? Number of fluent English Proficient? Number of English Learners?
 - ELD Levels How many level 1, 2, 3, 4, 5? As measured by ...?
 - Special Needs Students? Number with IEP's? for which services?
 - Number of students identified benchmark, strategic or intensive in reading and/or writing. (This information would be attained through your cooperating teacher.) What assessments were used to determine the identifications.
 - Other important characteristics of this class?
2. Determine what language and literacy standards students are working on learning. Choose one area to focus on for your lesson. (Phonemic Awareness? Phonics and decoding? Fluency? Comprehension and Literary Analysis? Writing Process?) Tell why you are choosing this particular area and what you hope to learn.

3. Determine the specific lesson you will be teaching (e.g. sounds and spellings of /f/, OR using Visualization as a comprehension strategy, OR Prewriting strategies for a prompt) What standards will be addressed? Tell how this lesson will fit into the broader whole of the theme or unit being taught in the class. (What comes before? after?) Plan what date and time you will give the lesson.
4. Think carefully about the details of your lesson sequence. Include attention to:
 - Presenting the standards and goals to the students
 - Presenting the skills or knowledge
 - Student activities for learning, processing, practicing
 - student grouping
 - Materials, resources, other adult roles
 - progress monitoring of student learning
 - classroom management strategies
 - engagement of all students (including using active learning experiences/ connecting subject matter to real-life contexts)
 - adaptations for special needs students, struggling students, advanced learners and English learners
5. Select two focus students whose achievement you will analyze. These two students could be the same students from Opportunity Task #1 or others. One student should be an English learner and the other a special-needs, struggling, or advanced learner.
6. Based on your thinking above, with special consideration of your two focus students, write up your lesson plan using the MSMU lesson plan format (see attached). Think about how to differentiate the lesson to address your two focus students and also the various achievement levels in the classroom?
7. Plan how you will assess your students' learning. What evidence will you collect during or after the lesson?

Teaching and Videotaping the Lesson:

1. Get permission slips signed for students to be taped if applicable.
2. Arrange to videotape the lesson. Acceptable formats are DVD or CD (viewable on a computer), flash drive, and any other format that is used by the education office. Any other format than above must be approved by the instructor. If you don't have a video camera, you may borrow equipment from the education office by reserving a video camera in advance. You may ask someone to videotape for you, or you may set the camera on a tripod. It is best to have it on the side so that the instructor can see and hear both you and the students. If a student does not have permission to be taped, make sure they are seated outside the area that is visible.
3. Teach your lesson!
4. Collect and score any work samples generated from the 2 focus students of interest, or identify the work they do orally on the tape.
5. Have your cooperating teacher (if any) write and sign an evaluation on the form provided, and discuss it with you.

Written Report:

1. Description
 - Your first section should describe what you planned to do and why. It should describe all pertinent information about your focus students and why they were selected. Most of your initial plan will go here, but should reflect any revisions you made.
 - Then describe the actual lesson as you carried it out. Also, describe the two focus students so the instructor can identify them on the tape.
2. Analysis

- View the videotape and analyze the effectiveness of your teaching. Consider any of the important issues we have discussed in class, including: What changes did you make to your plans and why? Were all students engaged? How do you know? How appropriate were the learning activities? How clear was your instruction? Was your use of time appropriate and effective? Did the students learn what you wanted them to? How do you know? See the TPA summaries for other considerations.
- Discuss the work samples (or oral work on the tape) of the two focus students. What evidence is there of them having learned or not learned the standards being taught? What strengths and areas for growth do you see? Cite specific examples from the work or tape to support your analysis.
- Discuss what recommendations you have for next steps. If students struggled, what kind of interventions could have been incorporated to make students more successful. Is there further assessment that needs to be done? What instructional plans would you put in place for the whole class and for these students based on your conclusions? Include the student samples. Be sure to omit names.

3. Reflection

- Finally, reflect on the whole experience. What did you learn about lesson planning and teaching? About making adaptations for differentiating instruction for different learners? What did you learn about this subject area in particular? In the future, what might you do the same way or differently? What are your own goals for increasing your knowledge and skill about lesson planning and teaching? See the TPA's for any other ideas that might be relevant to reflect on.

Submission Directions

- Please type the entire report in double-spaced 12pt font with 1-inch margins.
- Include all the supporting materials (photocopies of student work, not originals).
- Include your MSMU lesson plan for this lesson.
- Include your cooperating teacher's signed evaluation.
- Please do NOT use binders, clips or folders.
- Label your recording and submit it.
